Kathryn Roszak's Danse Lumière creates dances traveling through the numinous landscape of Tomas Tranströmer's poetry. "Young dancers move through a tangled love affair, a strange death on a subway platform, exile in the forest, the threat of dangers both without and within... a narrative of modern life, flashes of strong emotion, and a palpable sense of the world's beauty." (Linda Rugg, Chair, UC Berkeley Scandinavian Dept)

Choreography by Kathryn Roszak. Performed by Blythe Berg, Ramzi Jneid, Nitipat Pholchai, Lissa Resnick, and Linnea Snyderman, with readings by actor Earll Kingston.

The Danse Lumière company is recognized for adapting great works of literature to the stage through the fusion of dance, music, and theater, and is praised for its "intelligent, finely crafted dance theater". Roszak's choreography "interprets poetry in eloquent physical language." (Contra Costa Times)
The company was selected by the San Francisco Bay Guardian as one of the top ten dance performances of 2011.
